Each year, the Pennsylvania Academy of Dermatology and Dermatologic Surgery (PAD) pays special tribute to a member dermatologist who is a leader and role model in the specialty. Members of the dermatologic community are invited to nominate their peers for this award. This year's 2022 Dermatologist of the Year Award Winner is Dr. Renee Mathur. Dr. Mathur is a native of Dupont. She is a graduate of Wilkes University and Harvard Medical School. She completed her internship and residency at Duke University. She resides in Shavertown.

With over 20 years of experience in the world of Dermatology and medicine, her commitment to Dermatology is multitudinous. She is active in advocacy on behalf of the PAD. Dr. Mathur is Past President of the PA Academy of Dermatology, and serves on the AAD/A's Congressional Policy Committee, State Policy Committee, and Grassroots Advocacy Taskforce as Deputy Chair. She has been awarded Presidential Citations by both the PAD and the AAD/A.

Additionally, she has served at the Dermatology Foundation as State Vice Chair, State Chair, and currently serves as Secretary-Treasurer and Leaders Society Co-Chair. Dr. Mathur understands that the impact of the Dermatology Foundation's supported discoveries has had a direct effect on her practice and has resulted in innovative and life-changing therapies for her patients.
